wise ones considered Lady Vera to be invincible, and on past form she did appear to be pounds the best, but there nust be a streak of vellow somewhere in Lady Vera's make-up. On other occasions this young equine miss has been known to throw down her friends when all thought she would romp home, and when the bookmakers refused to lay any but a prohibitive price against her. She must be exceedingly intelligent, but horsemen say that she is just a plain dog. A terrier could have beaten her vesterday. and for a Workmaid it was easy.

It was a much better card that was on offer yesterday, that is, better in quantity if not in quality. Horsemen are begin-ning to awake to the fact that there is a race meeting going on, and that if they want to start off the season well they Anna Smith was the tip of the local contingent, and the little brown filly was heavily played. Scarfell was the trainers' choice, and Hoot Mon also had a following, while Typolian was considerably backed by the foreigners. The others were at long odds. The start was poor, Miller rushed Anna Smith into the lead at decrease they leading the bunch, with Scarfell away back. Blember came fast at the end and easily disposed of Nanno. Glorious Betsy stopped badly.

Lady Vera looked so much the best in the third that the books would offer only it to 4 against her, which was backed to 1. to 5 at post time. Old Colony and Workmald were about equal favorites for the place, while Umbrella was not wanted at any price.

The race was a big surprise. Workmald shot out at once and opened a big gap. Milher saw that he would have to gap, and Workmald won in a gallop, while even Old Colony beat the favorite. Umbrella was never in the hunt.

On the strength of reported fast work, alternarchen was made an odds-on favorite in the maiden race, fourth on the card. There were the usual tips out, however, and nearly everything was nibbled at more or less.

This streak of luck was the introductiof Moore to pitch for Topeka in the fifth inning. He had just reported, was entirely out of shape, and could do nothing with curves. All he had was a straight ball. A double by Blankenship, a single by Hughes, a pass, and an error netted Washington three runs in that inning. Moore then retired in favor of Clark, who held Washington down to one hit in the next three innings.

The Capitalites made five clean hits, out possibly Blankenship might have been redited with another one, which was ather hot for Ragan to handle at short. Graham pitched the first four innings for Washington, and, while three singles were made off him, he was all to the good. The run was made while he was n the box, but it was due to a remarkable collection of errors on the part of Perrine, Schlafly, and Cross and not to

That was a blow to left in the ninth by Hurlburt, which bounded badly in the rough outfield and got by John Anderson. Hughes fanned two men in the ninth inning and saved a very ticklish situation. He had almost perfect control, giving no bases on balls in the five rounds. An inshoot slipped out of his fingers and cracked Clark on the shoulder in the eighth, but that did no damage to Runkel sacrificed to Graam, who threw to Perrine in time to atch Cooley at second, but Perrine let he ball go to center and Cooley got sec-nd. Ragan hit one that Cross got with the bare hand and dropped as he was about to touch Cooley, who was running to third. The three errors thus filled the bases. Halla forced Ragan, but Cooley
